somewhat despotic and intolerable of position."

For some moons, he said, members of the House and Press gallery had noticed that the speaker frequently had made a jest of some official act, and no doubt the Speaker thought he could so treat Saturday's incident.

"But," he said, "the motive, purpose and effect of that action, which was unprecedented, unexpected and unannounced, was to destroy the very essence of representative government by annihilating the constitutionally guaranteed right of one-fifth of the House to place themselves on recording all cuses."

House to piace themselves on record in all cases."

"In the recollection of the Chair," said the Speaker, "since the present occupant has occupied the Chair, respect has been paid to the constitution and to the rules framed under it." He then quoted the rule regarding dilatory tactics and said:

"For two weeks past it is an open secret, time and again avowed by the sentleman who leads the minority, that he was resorting to dilatory proceedings for purposes which seemed to him satisfable, to emphasise, as he claimed, matters that were pending at the time constitution. The gentleman but, shortly before the motion to dijouvne was: made again avowed and onight to protect the interests being equal in their constitutional rights and in their rights under the rules."

After quoting the constitution bearing on the duttes of each House of Congress, Speaker Cannon declared that a was proceeding in a silatory manner when the Chair an-
